

Your Academic Career Action Plan

Your college experience is an important part of the career development process. In fact, it's where it begins. Every class you take and every experience you have will build your skills, expand your interests, and most of all, establish your goals.

Chart Your Course

Whether you're just starting out or part of the way through your college career, there are a variety of things you can do to prepare now for your future.

- 1st Year: Discover the connection between career development, major choices, internships, and other activities.
- 2nd Year: Start making decisions that take you further along the path as you continue exploring your options.
- 3rd Year: Zero in on your career goals, land an internship, or begin preparing applications for graduate school.
- 4th Year: Work on landing your first job, plan for graduate/professional school, or explore fellowships or one-year options.
- Graduate Program: Assess your career readiness, integrate into your area of interest, and establish goals that will prepare you to transition from graduate student into career.

Come see us.

We invite you to schedule an appointment with a career coach as early as your first year on campus and continue regularly. We'll help you make the very most of your academic experience and get you on your way toward planning future success.